Training makes the difference!

As much as we love them, sometimes our dogs do things we wish they wouldn't—or don't do things we wish they would. Training is the answer.

What is training?

Training is simply a way to establish a system of communication between you and your dog. A dog who has not been trained can't possibly know the "house rules." It's up to us to set boundaries and show our dogs what we expect of them in a way that they can understand.

If we don't train our dogs, they'll do what comes naturally. They'll bark, steal food, jump on the guests and ignore our requests. They're not being bad or stubborn—they're just acting like dogs!

What's the benefit?

A dog who understands his role in the family has fewer anxiety and stress-related behavior problems. A well-behaved dog is welcome everywhere, especially in his own home.
